

Spin resolved photoemission

Giorgio Rossi

Dipartimento di Fisica, Università di Modena e Reggio Emilia
Via Campi, 213/A - 41100 Modena (Italy)

The measure of spin polarization of photoemitted electrons is described in principle and in its application to the study of electron states in band structure measurements as well as in the study of magnetic order of surfaces and nanostructures. Spin resolved photoemission can become a key method for time resolved experiments with pulsed sources from Free Electron Lasers, novel experimental developments will be introduced.